MARKET COMMENTARY

Australian shares rose for the fifth consecutive month in February with the S&P/ASX200 Accumulation Index ending the month +1.5% higher. The February financial reporting season was unanimously touted as the best in many years. A majority of companies delivered better-than-expected profit results as earnings growth has returned faster than previously forecast. Reporting season also demonstrated that dividends are recovering. Many companies delivered significant dividend increases, notably miners exposed to soaring commodity prices, retailers and other COVID 'winners'.

Banks were the best performing stocks in February buoyed by earnings 'beats' and the downward revision of impairment costs. Towards the end of February rising inflation expectations tempered optimism somewhat across equity markets in Australia and globally. Technology stocks were the worst performers in February as a confluence of factors including rising bond yields, earnings downgrades and stretched valuations saw investors reduce their exposure to the sector. We maintain a generally optimistic outlook, although we acknowledge that coronavirus-related challenges continue to face the economy.
